Trees in the Wind

by John McGrath

'Wind will not cease though the trees want rest'

Mao Tse Tung

Joe I am the savage Alsatian, lusting for blood: Are you a man? I'll go for your balls: Are you a woman? I'll jump up at your throat, with my great big doggy cock thrusting away for you down below. Are you a child? I'll tear the hot flesh off your bones.
Why?
Because I want to know something Why don't we shoot all killer dogs?

'Remarkable both in form and content ... as exciting theatre as anything available at The Fringe'
'Infringe 71'

8 & 9 November at 7.30 pm

Soft or a Girl

We fought for those houses. We risked our lives for those streets. Some of us died to stop Liverpool being demolished. Now look at it.

'Oh Ellie, you're normally so inventive'.
'I've stopped being so, come inside.
I hate you. I'm going to lacerate you'.

Her Come on in son
It's no sin son
Let's begin son
Throw your gear on the floor
Now just lie-der-down
On the eiderdown
And I'll slie-der-down Here beside you.

Him You're so good to me
It's a fantasy
I'm so glad to be Here in your little room.

Her Just relax now
Slip off your slax now
There's no tax now Here beside me.

Him Oh Mrs Sweeney
Don't be a meeny
Open your door
Just a little bit more
Oh Mrs Sweeney
So open your door
Just a little bit more ...
